

The Big Secret Plan

One sunny afternoon, Sofia and Leo met at their favorite park bench. They were very excited because their friend Sam was graduating next week. "Sam worked so hard this year," Sofia said with a smile. "Shall we organize a surprise graduation party for him?" Leo's eyes brightened. "That sounds great! I'd love to help," he replied. They opened a notebook and began to think.

"First, we need to talk about our arrangements," Sofia said, writing at the top of the page. "We need to follow a sequence so we don't forget anything." Leo nodded. "Let's make a to-do list! How about inviting all of our classmates?" Sofia agreed, "Yes, why not? That is a wonderful idea. I will write the guest list now."

"How many people are on the list?" Leo asked. Sofia counted the names. "There are a lot of people! We need to think about food. Would you like to help me with the snacks?" Leo smiled but then looked worried. "I'm sorry, I can't cook very well. But I can buy some beverages at the market!" Sofia laughed, "Certainly! That is very helpful, Leo."

"Next, we should think about the decorations," Sofia suggested. "How many balloons do we need?" Leo looked around the park for inspiration. "I think a few balloons are not enough. We need a lot of colorful balloons and some confetti!" Sofia smiled, "I agree. Shall we buy some gold and silver ones? They look very fancy for a graduation."

then, Sofia took out some glitter and markers. "After that, we must create the invitation card," she said. She worked carefully. On the card, she wrote: "YOU ARE INVITED! Join us for Sam's Graduation Surprise! Date: Friday at 5:00 PM. Place: Leo's Garden. Please keep it a secret!" Sofia showed it to Leo. "Would you like to see the design?"

Leo looked at the card. "It's beautiful! Now, what about the music?" he asked. "Shall we hire a DJ?" Sofia shook her head. "I'm sorry, but that's not a good idea. A DJ is too expensive. How about making a playlist on your phone instead?" Leo thought for a second. "It sounds better! I have some great songs we can use."

"How much juice do we need?" Sofia asked as they checked their supplies. Leo looked at the bottles. "We have some orange juice, but we don't have any apple juice. We should buy a few more bottles." Sofia added it to the list. "And how much cake should we order? Sam loves chocolate cake!" Leo replied, "Let's get a giant one!"

the day of the party finally arrived. After that, Leo and Sofia went to the garden early. "Let's decorate the trees!" Sofia shouted. They hung the gold and silver balloons everywhere. Leo put the large chocolate cake on the table. "Everything looks perfect," Leo said. "I hope Sam doesn't suspect anything!"

Finally, the gate opened and Sam walked in. He looked very confused. Sofia and the other guests jumped out from behind the bushes. "SURPRISE!" they screamed. Sam's face turned bright red with joy. "Oh my cupcakes! Is this for me?" he asked, laughing. Sofia hugged him. "Happy Graduation, Sam! You deserve a big celebration!"

the party was a big success. Everyone ate a lot of cake and drank some cold juice. "Thank you so much, Leo and Sofia," Sam said. "Would you like to see my diploma?" Leo laughed and patted Sam on the back. "Of course! We are so proud of you. This was the best plan ever!"

CHECK-OUT FOR MORE!

www.westernla.net